Degree and Certificate Options to be Discussed

Option 1: A twelve course, Master of Science degree in Instructional Technology with a concentration in school library media.

Option 2: An eight-course, post master's degree certificate in library media for candidates who have previously earned a master's and possess teacher certification.

Note: the program is ALA/AASL/CAEP accredited and completion of either option results in MSDE library media specialist licensure.

Online Program of Study Options

Main Campus Online Program

Coursework is taken at your own pace with up to six or more courses completed each year. This option is available to master's degree and post-master's degree certificate candidates. Courses are billed at full tuition and fees. Interested applicants may apply via <https://www.towson.edu/academics/graduate/admissions/apply/>

Towson Learning Network Multisystem Programs and County Cohorts

Cohorts complete three courses per year (one fall, one spring, and one summer session course. Cohort courses are available to Maryland school employees and billed at discounted tuition (approximately 50%). The next master's degree and post master's degree certificate cohorts will begin in the fall 2025.
